

Aviation Research in Aspects of Environment

Content: This organized session aims to assess the environmental impact of aviation and to discuss required technologies, which include novel aircraft/engine configurations, improved aerodynamic efficiency, airport operations and air traffic management. Air transport demand is predicted to double in the next 10 – 15 years. This brings major challenges with regard to environmental effects. New concepts and breakthrough technologies to reduce the environmental impact will be needed for sustainable aviation.