

The 10th Japan-Korea Students' Symposium

Content: The Japan-Korea students' symposium has been alternately held in Seoul and Sendai every year since 2000. This symposium starts from joint laboratory workshop between Mizusaki Laboratory in Tohoku University and Yoo laboratory in Seoul National University, and marks the 10th anniversary. All students are to make 20 minutes oral presentation or poster presentation with short introduction on the topics of transport in solids and through interfaces.

The main purpose of this symposium is not only an improvement of the research level of the students by the presentation and voluntary management but also the formation of a close friendship and a partnership and the acquisition of the discussion ability and the project accomplishment ability.

If you are interested in, feel free to contact us by e-mail.